Fracas at Tribune Camp, Orland, Is Nearly Fatal

According to a report made to Judge Henry Waje of Orland Park, the Tribune Forty and Eight Camp for convalescent ex-soldiers located in the forest preserve west of Orland Park, was the scene of a near murder Sunday morning when one of the patients by the name of Walter Bross, attacked the mess hall chief Sidney Love and nearly choked him to death. Bross was arrested and taken to Oak Forest and later to the Blue Island city jail. Love was taken to a Chicago hospital. His condition has been reported as quite serious. A brother of Love swore out a warrant against Bross according to Judge Waje, and the case has been set for a hearing in the court next Tuesday afternoon.

TINLEY TOWN TOPICS

The "Ever-Peppy" Club of young folks of Tinley Park, "The Tinley Park Triangle Club," by name are sponsoring a play, "Tommy," which will be given on the evenings of December 19 and 20.

It is rumored that the Triangle Club has discarded the idea of playing basketball in Tinley Park, for the coming season, and will only play as a traveling team. Comments have been made by various townspeople on this as they expected to see some exciting times in Tinley Park this coming winter and many were looking forward to see games as seen in the past four or five years. Surely it cannot be due to poor attendance, as the games in former years were always exceedingly well patronized.

The Tinley Team have games scheduled for Thursday at Harvey and the following Monday at Crete.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. William Siemson, met with an accident last Saturday, near Midlothian Country Club, when the car he was driving, was damaged by a collision with another car, owned by nearby residents. It is understood the driver of the other car skidded when he tried to stop and slid into the front of the Siemson car, breaking among other things the front bumper and flattening a tire.

The play "An Old Fashioned Mother," given last Friday evening by the Tinley Park Methodist Church was well attended and especial mention was made of the ability of the actors.

Mrs. Fred Hick has returned from the hospital where she underwent a major operation.

The regular meeting of the Tinley Park Lions Club was held Monday evening in Andres Hall.

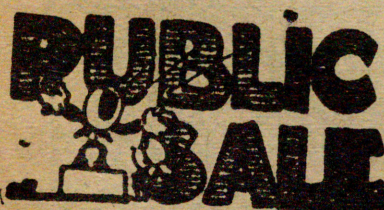

A notice was read by the sec. that the signs recently purchased by the club, namely, the "Protect Our Children" signs, which are to be placed at various intersections, were now enroute and should be received in the near future.

The many committees to be on duty at the forthcoming Christmas dance were appointed at this time by the president.

It was also decided to drop the plans of rearranging the hall for basketball as it was reported that the Triangle Club had decided to only play out-of-town ball this season.

The proposition of having a village Bulletin-board for the purpose of showing building permits and posting contracts to be let, was also brought up and was placed in the hands of the board of directors.

Great discussion was also placed on having another Valentine party, as held last year, which was also placed into the hands of the Board of Directors for further handling.

TINLEY PARK P. T. A. NOTES

By CLARA S. GOESSEL
The regular meeting of the P. T. A. of Tinley Park, School District 146, was held on Friday, December 6, in the Tinley Park school.

The meeting which was held in Miss Vogt's room, commenced with a short Christmas play presented by the pupils of Miss Vogt, which was very entertaining and greatly enjoyed by all members present.

A blanket was presented by the P. T. A. to the school to be used in the rest room. A couch pad and pillow and two new book cases were also presented to the school at this time.

The school was also presented with a new banner, to be given into the custody of the room receiving the most votes by the P. T. A. members present at each monthly meeting. This new banner was made in the colors adopted by the P. T. A. At this meeting Miss Vogt's room won the banner.

It was voted at this meeting to have a Father's Night. It was decided to have this on the evening of January 10th.

Mrs. Nordstrum and Mrs. W. Mager were admitted to membership at this time.

Mention was also made to have all members still holding unsold tickets for the recent play, kindly return promptly to Mrs. Berg to straighten accounts.

Mrs. Florence Anderson, president extended the Season's Greetings to the members in a novel way. This was done by way of handing members of each committee a small packet, each of which had a letter printed on it's back. These members were then requested to stand in line and show the letter on the packet, which spelled the words, "Merry Christmas."

Each packet also had the following inscription:

"Here's a packet to hold your notes, Or greetings from friendly folks, And with it I send the hope, That you have a 'Merry Christmas'."

Mrs. F. Arnold of Orland Park, Dies

Mrs. Franz Ludwig Arnold, aged 72 years, well known resident of Orland Park, died at the Burnside hospital, Chicago, December 4th.

Mrs. Christina Wilmenia Arnold was born in Germany, March 21, 1857. She came to America in 1881. The same year she was united in marriage with Franz Arnold. To this union ten children were born of whom three preceded the mother in death.

Surviving Mrs. Arnold are seven children, Catherine, Lillian, Edward, Joseph, Louis of Orland Park; Geo. and John of Chicago; one sister, Mrs. Schwendener of Seattle, Washington. Mr. Arnold passed away a number of years ago.

Funeral services were held last Saturday from the Orland Park M. E. church with burial in Cooper cemetery. Rev. Paul Sanders officiated.

Wm. Lahmann, Pioneer Homer Resident, Dies

William Lahmann, aged 80 years, a resident of Homer township for many years, died Thursday evening, December 5th. Since last June his health was failing and last week he suffered a paralytic stroke which caused his death.

William John Lahmann was born May 19, 1849 in Germany. In 1869 he came to America and resided at Blue Island for several years.

In 1881 he was united in marriage with Wilhelmina Mindermann who survives. Four children were born to this union, two sons and two daughters. One son William, and one daughter, Marie Nagel, preceded the father in death.

The deceased was an ambitious member of the St. John Evangelical church of Mokena for 50 years at one time holding office in the church council.

He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Herman Bruhn and one son Herman.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena with burial in St. John Cemetery. Rev. G. G. Bratzel officiated.

Hold School

In Church

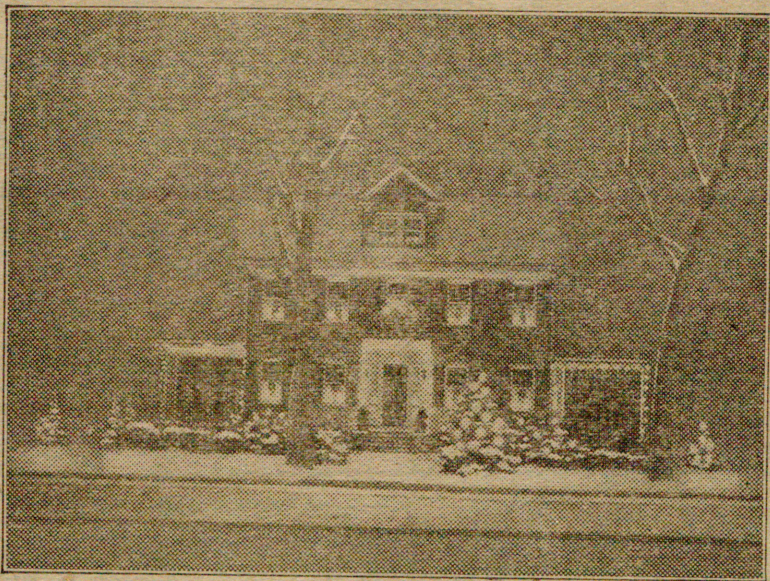

It would take more than one fire to keep the children in District 151, Green Garden township, away from their classes.

The school house burned two weeks ago due to a defect in the heating system. But a week later the 14 pupils were attending classes in the St. Peter's Evangelical church at Green Garden. It is probable that the church will serve as a classroom for the remainder of the year.

The teacher is Louise Jacklich. Directors are Henry E. Harms, Wm. C. Lorenzen and Wm. Nieland.

Pupils are Lois and Lorraine Deist; Gertrude and Raymond Harms; Ruby and Rav Janssen; Lois and Virgil Lorenzen; Marjorie and Richard Nieland; Earl and Lucille Ruhbeck; Chester and Pearl Schlattman.

Lighting The Way For Santa

Many residents of this community are following the pleasant custom of decorating the exterior of their homes for Christmas. Much ingenuity is being shown in the arranging of colored lights and holiday wreaths to spread the cheer and hospitality that are so important a part of this season. More of these displays this year than ever before are wishing "A Merry Christmas" to everyone who passes by.

Beg Your Pardon

L. E. Bethards, former Chevrolet dealer of Mokena, now located in Chicago, has taken exception to an article published in The News-Bulletin on Nov. 22, 1929 in which it was stated that the state Fire Marshall was anxious to question him regarding the fire which destroyed Mr. Bethards garage in the Fisher Building also that he was connected with the Green Gable road house south of Mokena and that bootleggers had not been paid for booze alleged to have been sold there and that he left a string of debts behind him. Mr. Bethards denies these assertions and says he is trying hard to get on his feet again. It is the policy of this paper to be fair to all, so in fairness to Mr. Bethards we publish his denial as above mentioned. The information contained in the article objected to by Mr. Bethards was supplied to the News-Bulletin thru official sources.

Tinley Man Recalls Days Of Harding At Marion, O.

Marion, Ohio, Dec. 9, 1929

To the Editor:
Sitting here this evening thinking over some of the past, recalls to my mind when I was in Marion once before, August 10, 1923. I was here in attendance at the funeral of President Warren Harding. The aspect of Marion today differs greatly from that time. Everything is now quiet. But on that date this little Ohio city was crowded to its limits with people from all parts of the United States to pay homage to its dead President.

I well-remember how the Boy Scouts had charge of the streets to control and regulate traffic on that day. And I will say they did a good job of it. On that occasion of course I saw some of our notables at the head of our nation. Namely Calvin Coolidge and wife arrived and were driven direct to the home of President Harding's father where his body lay in state for the public to pass and view for the last time. Then came Taft, Hughes, congressmen, Henry Ford, Edison and Firestone.

I stood within twenty feet of them as they alighted from their cars and entered the Harding home. Of course Coolidge and wife were flanked by secret service men from the time they left the train until they returned to it. That was a sad and sorrowful day for Marion. But time changes conditions. Likewise Marion is now different from then rather quiet but still a good business like place.

Several large industries go to make up the place, which of course, is what will make a good town out of a poor one when once they get located. Wish Tinley had a few of them. They would help the little village a great deal even if it is near Chicago. Am leaving here tomorrow so must close and turn in.

Yours truly,

T. C. DAVIS

A Christmas Carol
God bless you all this Christmas Day
And drive the cares and griefs away.
Oh, may the shining Bethlehem star
Which led the wise men from afar
Upon your heads, good sirs still glow
To light the path that ye should know.

Edgar Guest

Don't forget that Santa will be with us on the evening of December 21, when we gather around the tree in the park, to sing Christmas Carols. The time is seven thirty.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held in the home of Mrs. Henry Vogt, Jr., Friday, December 20, at two o'clock. If you cannot attend, please notify the hostess.

Our president Mrs. R. J. Hug received the following letter which will be of interest to all.

December 3, 1929

Dear Club President:
The members of your club are invited to hear Mrs. Charles Hubbard speak on Flower Arrangements and Table setting.

Mrs. Hubbard is a charming and magnetic speaker and has recognized ability in this line.

It is especially important that those who are setting tables for the Central States Flower Show attend this lecture.

It will be helpful to all. The day is December 18th. The time is from 1 to 5 o'clock. The place is the Stadium. Bring pencils and note book.

This will be a real school. It will be well planned and executed.

Sincerely,
EDITH R. FISHER

MOKENA P. T. A. ACTIVITIES

By Publicity Chairman,
Mrs. F. Braun

The Mokena P. T. A. wish to thank Rev. Harold Sandall, and all men who assisted him in building and painting, or those who furnished material for the indoor stage scenery for the Auditorium stage, this scenery can be used permanently, and means much for future stage settings. The setting was used Friday evening in both plays.

The P. T. A. also wish to thank all members of the Cast of the two home talent plays, "Thursday Evening" and "Cabbages", also their director Rev. Sandall for their efforts in presenting the plays so successfully.

Proceeds of the Friday evening plays amounted to $73.00, after expenses are deducted the balance will be used for Gym equipment.

The Mokena Community Christmas celebration will be held at the new school.

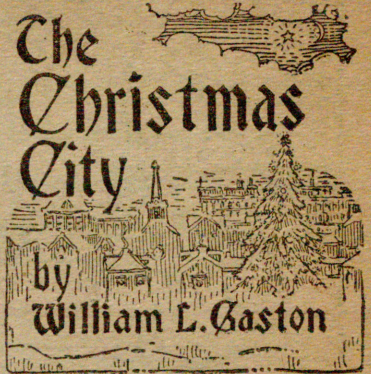

Friday evening, December 20th at 7:30 o'clock the two Black Hill Spruces will be decorated and lighted as our community Christmas trees.

The Mokena P. T. A. is co-operating with the teachers in making this a really enjoyable Christmas celebration. Everyone is invited to gather at the school around the lighted trees at 7:30 o'clock, Friday evening, Dec. 20 to join in community singing, led by the Mokena Camp Fire Girls.

After singing all will go into the auditorium where the children will present their Christmas play. Santa Claus will be there with gifts for all the children.

There will be no P. T. A. business meeting in December.

Tune in on Radio station W M A Q, Friday afternoon, December 13, from 4:30 to 5 o'clock and be benefited by the P. T. A. program, the

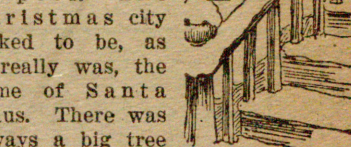

IN THE Christmas city everybody called him Uncle Kriss. None of the young people knew that he had any other name. But everybody knew that Christmas was not to be Christmas if Uncle Kriss did not direct the festivities.

Uncle Kriss was neither rich nor poor. He had no family of his own. Nature fashioned him on the pattern of Santa Claus. He was never happier than when planning a happy Christmas for the town—the town which came to be called the Christmas city.

Long before Christmas Uncle Kriss would go day after day with the boys and girls into the hills to gather evergreens and red berries for wreaths. A truck was sent to haul them to town. Then for a full week everybody worked making Christmas wreaths. A big bow of red crepe paper was fastened to the bottom of each wreath.

On the day before Christmas there was a Christmas wreath in the front window of every home, rich or poor. The Christmas city looked to be, as it really was, the home of Santa Claus. There was always a big tree erected in the street downtown and decorated with colored lights, cotton and tinsel. A small tree was sent to every home in town where there was a child. "Give the people plenty of Christmas," Uncle Kriss used to say, and they will need no police nor jail. The town had a small jail but only once in ten years had there been anybody in it on Christmas day, and then there was a Christmas wreath in the little window behind the iron bars.

On Christmas morning Uncle Kriss formed the men into a company of good fellows and sent them from home to home among the poor to see that no child was missed and no one was cold or hungry on Christmas day, in the Christmas city.

THE SEA DEVIL

By LOWELL THOMAS

Count Luckner's passenger-prisoners were so good natured that life aboard the Seadler was happy. He catered to their tastes by providing the favorite dishes of the various nationalities, and they appreciated his efforts. The only one of the prisoners who in any way misbehaved himself was Captain Lecoq, who, like the rest, had been asked not to go into the fore part of the ship.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

"My magazines," I said, "are in the forward half of the boat. I do not want you to know exactly where they are placed. After you are released, you might reveal the secret. Then, one of these merry days, if some cruiser takes a shot at me, and if the location of my magazines is known, they'll aim right at that spot. A shell there and up in the air we go. I must ask you to give me your word of honor that you will not go into the forepart, else I will have to keep you confined."

Each skipper gave me his word, including Lecoq.

Captain Lecoq broke his promise. He not only went secretly into the forepart, but he made sketches of the layout there. Captain Mullen of the Pimmore saw the sketches, knocked Lecoq down, and reported him to me. I berated Lecoq soundly.

"And as a result of your dishonorable action," I said, "when I release my prisoners and send them off to some port, there will be one Frenchman who will remain behind, and that Frenchman will be you. You will continue your cruise with us. I know where my magazines are, and I can not trust any promise that you now give me."

He turned a bit green around the gills at that, but there was nothing he could say in reply.

Our only woman aboard, the skipper's little bride, grew melancholy. We did everything we could to make the time pleasant for her, but she pined for the society of other women. It was rather a trial for her to be so long the only woman among several hundred men.

"Count, I do so wish there were a woman aboard that I could talk to," she said to me a bit coaxingly one day. "Why don't you catch me one?"

I always like to oblige a lady, particularly one so charming and agreeable as she, but catching another woman was a game of chance with us. You don't often find fair company aboard freighters, especially in tropical waters. However, I said:

"Madam, we will do our best."

At times I used to amuse myself by joining the crowd on the lookout in the rigging. It was a misty day, and nobody had much of a chance of seeing anything. Then it cleared a little in the west, and Boating Officer Preiss, who was beside me, thought he saw a ship. I instructed the helmsman to steer in that direction, and after fifteen minutes a large British barque appeared through the mist. As we drew near her, I saw a white figure on the deck. Sure enough a woman.

"Madam," I shouted to the Canadian skipper's bride, "get ready to welcome your companion. She'll be paying you a call in a few minutes."

Everybody, prisoners and all, swarmed on deck to witness the exceptional capture. The Seadler bore down on the unlucky barque.

The captain looked curiously at the crowded figures standing at our rail, of every color and race. They waved gayly. Our gramophone blared out, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

"Hello," he shouted through his megaphone, "collecting volunteers?"

He thought we were picking up war volunteers from the Atlantic islands. "Volunteers?" I called in return. "Oh, yes."

Our prisoners laughed a bit.

"Any news of the war?" he asked.

Officers and sailors and the woman on his deck craned their necks for a reply.

"Much news of the war," I responded. "I will signal it."

They stared, awaiting the signal.

"G-I-D," our signal flags went up; "heave to or I will fire."

I could see the captain rapidly

thumping the pages of his book. His head jerked up suddenly. His binoculars focussed themselves on our masthead where the German flag now waved. Our gun mask dropped, and the cannon peered forth. By Joe, but it raised a commotion on the deck.

When she saw it, the woman darted into her cabin. The sailors ran to the boats. Even the helmsman deserted the wheel. The captain was the only one who kept his head. He seized the helm with a firm hand, and the ship hove to.

Our guests were always interested in the prospect of having new additions to their company. They had an ever-ready, cordial welcome for fresh arrivals. This time, the coming of a second feminine passenger made the occasion a gala one. Everybody put on his best manners. The members of our "Captains' club" marshaled their forces on deck, ready to greet the officers and the lady from the captured craft with suitable dignity and formality.

Our little woman put on her best clothes and asked me for a nosegay from a supply of artificial flowers we had captured. The newly arriving woman, who scarcely knew what to expect aboard our dreadful pirate craft, was surprised when she was greeted not only by our "Captains' club" with all of its stately courtesies, but also by a brightly smiling young woman who presented her with a bouquet of flowers that made up in brightness of color what it lacked in sweetness of perfume, since they were imitation ones.

The two women immediately became the best of friends, and the convivial spirit aboard made our happiness complete.

The captured barque, the British Yeoman, carried a rare store of provisions, including some live pigs and chickens. She also had two pets, a curious pair—a rabbit and a pigeon. We promptly adopted them and called the pigeon "the dove of peace" in honor of the spirit aboard our raiding ark.

Our floating hotel was about full. If we wanted to take any more guests aboard, we would have to get rid of present company. The old pirates would have had a plank-walking ceremony. That was a sure way to prevent inconvenient information from getting around. Undoubtedly, it would have enabled us to keep our existence still secret. We were buccaneers in a sense, but not quite that bad. We would have to take other measures.

When our prisoners got to port and our freebooting career became known, cruisers, of course, would set out after us. They would make the narrow Atlantic much too hot for us. We would have to seek other waters. The broad Pacific remained. We did not want to hold our prisoners for the always rough passage of Capt Horn, where, in addition, there were likely to be cruisers on watch, keeping a guard for suspicious ships that might be trying to take the shortest route from European waters to the Pacific. We might be shelled and sunk, but it would have been scarcely humane to take a chance of going down with all our prisoners on board. So we arranged it in a way that would enable us to get a good start on our trip around Cape Horn before the cruisers could get word or us.

The French barque, the Cambronne, came along. You should have seen her heave to and her yards come banging down when our German flag went up and we signaled the inevitable: "Stop or I shall fire."

Her captain exhibited all of the usual Gallic despair at the prospect of losing his ship. We looked the craft over. Our gramophone blared out, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

"Hello," he shouted through his megaphone, "collecting volunteers?"

He thought we were picking up war

volunteers from the Atlantic islands. "Volunteers?" I called in return. "Oh, yes."

Our prisoners laughed a bit.

"Any news of the war?" he asked.

Officers and sailors and the woman on his deck craned their necks for a reply.

"Much news of the war," I responded. "I will signal it."

They stared, awaiting the signal.

"G-I-D," our signal flags went up; "heave to or I will fire."

I could see the captain rapidly

thumping the pages of his book. His head jerked up suddenly. His binoculars focussed themselves on our masthead where the German flag now waved. Our gun mask dropped, and the cannon peered forth. By Joe, but it raised a commotion on the deck.

When she saw it, the woman darted into her cabin. The sailors ran to the boats. Even the helmsman deserted the wheel. The captain was the only one who kept his head. He seized the helm with a firm hand, and the ship hove to.

Our guests were always interested in the prospect of having new additions to their company. They had an ever-ready, cordial welcome for fresh arrivals. This time, the coming of a second feminine passenger made the occasion a gala one. Everybody put on his best manners. The members of our "Captains' club" marshaled their forces on deck, ready to greet the officers and the lady from the captured craft with suitable dignity and formality.

Our little woman put on her best

clothes and asked me for a nosegay from a supply of artificial flowers we had captured. The newly arriving woman, who scarcely knew what to expect aboard our dreadful pirate craft, was surprised when she was greeted not only by our "Captains' club" with all of its stately courtesies, but also by a brightly smiling young woman who presented her with a bouquet of flowers that made up in brightness of color what it lacked in sweetness of perfume, since they were imitation ones.

The two women immediately became the best of friends, and the convivial spirit aboard made our happiness complete.

The captured barque, the British Yeoman, carried a rare store of provisions, including some live pigs and chickens. She also had two pets, a curious pair—a rabbit and a pigeon. We promptly adopted them and called the pigeon "the dove of peace" in honor of the spirit aboard our raiding ark.

Our floating hotel was about full. If we wanted to take any more guests aboard, we would have to get rid of present company. The old pirates would have had a plank-walking ceremony. That was a sure way to prevent inconvenient information from getting around. Undoubtedly, it would have enabled us to keep our existence still secret. We were buccaneers in a sense, but not quite that bad. We would have to take other measures.

When our prisoners got to port and our freebooting career became known, cruisers, of course, would set out after us. They would make the narrow Atlantic much too hot for us. We would have to seek other waters. The broad Pacific remained. We did not want to hold our prisoners for the always rough passage of Capt Horn, where, in addition, there were likely to be cruisers on watch, keeping a guard for suspicious ships that might be trying to take the shortest route from European waters to the Pacific. We might be shelled and sunk, but it would have been scarcely humane to take a chance of going down with all our prisoners on board. So we arranged it in a way that would enable us to get a good start on our trip around Cape Horn before the cruisers could get word or us.

The French barque, the Cambronne, came along. You should have seen her heave to and her yards come banging down when our German flag went up and we signaled the inevitable: "Stop or I shall fire."

Her captain exhibited all of the usual Gallic despair at the prospect of losing his ship. We looked the craft over. Our gramophone blared out, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

"Hello," he shouted through his megaphone, "collecting volunteers?"

He thought we were picking up war

volunteers from the Atlantic islands. "Volunteers?" I called in return. "Oh, yes."

Our prisoners laughed a bit.

We topped off the Cambronne's upper masts, so that she could set only her lower sails. She could not make any speed now, and it would take her from ten to fourteen days to get to Rio de Janeiro, which was the nearest port. Then I exacted a pledge from Captain Mullen:

"Captain," said I, "we are releasing our prisoners and they are under your command. I understand perfectly well that when you get to port our existence will be known. We will be a sailing ship in a world of armored cruisers. We will be chased like a wild deer. We need a start. We have taken care that you do not get to port too soon. One thing remains, though. You may meet a ship within a week or within a day—it may be a steamer with a wireless plant. I ask for your word that you will not communicate with any ship until you reach port. We have, I hope, treated our prisoners fairly, and I ask this of you in return. I must have your solemn word on it."

"Count," he replied, "I give you my word that the Cambronne will not communicate with any ship until she is in port at Rio."

We shook hands on it, and my mind was at rest. It was no risk to take the word of the Pimmore's old skipper.

He played his part nobly. He passed several steamers on his way to Rio, but steered clear of them. One comical thing happened. A big steamer came toward the Cambronne one morning, and then her captain noticed the crowd of prisoners on the ship's deck. He was a cautious soul. It looked suspicious. The steamer turned and fled at full speed.

There remained the case of Captain Lecoq of the La Rochefoucauld, who had broken his word to me and whom I had promised not to release with the other prisoners. He tried to dissuade me. He was against the thought of being kept aboard the Seadler throughout her long cruise, the end of which no one could foretell. He vowed by all the saints that he would keep the position of the ship's magazines locked sternly within his bosom. I would not listen to him. I told him that the others would go but he would remain. I intended to hold him until we had caught and released our next batch of prisoners. He enlisted the other captains to intercede in his behalf. They came and asked me to relent.

"Gentlemen," I replied, "I have just now rested the safety of my ship on Captain Mullen's word. You are all ship masters. You know a captain's duty to the vessel he commands. Very well, I know that Captain Mullen's word is good. I have taken the others of you at your word, and you have not failed me. But Captain Lecoq broke his word. Can I trust him not to break it again?"

They argued so hard for their unfortunate fellow skipper that I finally gave in. After all even if he did break his word again and tell of the position of my magazines, it did not necessarily mean disaster. I made him sign a promise and made the other captains sign as witnesses to his promise. Then I gave orders that he should go with the rest.

We paid our prisoners off, just as if they had been working for us. Each received wages for the time he had spent aboard, and each was paid for the wage he ordinarily received from his shipowner. By Joe, that made them happy. We had a final banquet. The sailors feasted in their quarters. I entertained the officers and ladies in my cabin. Toasts of champagne were drunk, and at the end there were cordial handshakes. We transferred the crowd to the Cambronne in boat-loads, and each boat, as it pushed off, gave three cheers for the Seadler.

We had been away from port for eight weeks and had sunk eleven vessels, representing a total of more than forty thousand tons of allied shipping. The Atlantic had given us its share. Now to the Pacific. And God save us from the cruisers.

Struck Whales "Drown"

As a general thing the whale when struck by the whaler's harpoon dives below the surface and soon reappears for air to be greeted with another harpoon or two which puts him out of business. Occasionally they do not reappear and the explanation made is that they are drowned. Having received their death blow they reach the bottom, but have not the strength to return and their lungs filling with water makes it all the more difficult, as they are deprived of the buoyancy that this quantity of air would impart to their bodies.

Brilliant Idea

An elderly woman was taken to see a basket ball match in which her son was playing. After watching for a few moments she inquired:

"What is the—er—object of this game?"

"Why," said the guide, "the object is to put the ball in that net."

"Well," said the woman, with one of those rare flashes of genius, "it would be much simpler if they would get out of each other's way."

Thousands of Women Have Banished "Guess Work" From Their Baking. They now know they can get perfect results every time—that time is saved and worry eliminated.

THEY use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that two sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe... it was not uniform in oven action.

So now all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. As each batch comes through the mill it is tested by actual baking—bread, cakes, biscuits, pastries—in an oven just like yours. Only flour which acts the same perfect way every time is allowed to go out to you. Thus you know in advance exactly what your results will be.

Smooth Tree Dangerous

When Lightning Rages

Smooth-barked trees served as fatal roosts for thousands of birds near St. Charles, Mo., when they were charged with electricity during a storm last August. Dr. William G. Wilson, ornithologist, will tell the United States Department of Agriculture in a report which he is preparing. More than 5,000 dead birds were reported to have been found on a farm a short distance from St. Charles, and more than 1,100 on another farm, following the storm. "I have never heard of a case of this kind before," Doctor Wilson said, "and it may not happen again in a thousand years, but I believe that it is worth reporting to federal experts. In my opinion only birds roosting on smooth-barked trees were killed when unusual atmospheric conditions charged the trees with electricity. I believe that this kind of tree is a conductor of electricity during a storm because water cannot be absorbed, making the tree attractive to the electrical charge. The charge was not strong enough to kill any but the smallest birds, however, since no large ones were found to have been victims."

Not Manual Laborers

Of the 290 Laborite members of the British house of commons few have come from the hard laboring classes they represent. On the contrary, titles, wealth and professions are well represented in the ranks of the Labor members of parliament. Among them are two baronets, a baronet's wife who is also a marquis' daughter, two king's counselors, one banker, three professors, one clergyman, two solicitors, four retired army officers, nine lecturers, fourteen teachers, one chemist, ten barristers, one landowner, one Salvation army commissioner and two cartoonists.

Mrs. R. SullivanPasses Away

Mrs. Roger Sullivan, widow of the famous Cook County Democratic chieftain, the late Roger Sullivan, and well known to many residents of Tinley Park, died in Chicago in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert M. Wolf, 342 Wellington Avenue, last Thursday.

Since the death of her husband nearly ten years ago Mrs. Sullivan had become noted for her charities. While her husband was climbing to success in politics and business she preferred to be the homemaker and rear her five children rather than share in his public life.

Roger C. Sullivan was generally credited with having made possible the nomination of Woodrow Wilson because other state delegations followed the lead of Illinois when Sullivan switched his support from Champ Clark to Wilson. Four years later a move was started for Sullivan's nomination for Vice President, but it was withdrawn when President Wilson's wish to have Vice President Thomas R. Marshall renominated was made known.

His death followed within a few years and he left one-third of his estate to his widow. Thereafter numerous scholarships were provided by Mrs. Sullivan. These and her other charitable interests are not to cease, her only son, Boetius, made known recently. She bequeathed one-seventh of her estate, now estimated at from $1,500,000 to two million dollars to charity, he said.

Mrs. Sullivan was born in Bristol, Illinois, 69 years ago. Her maiden name was Helen M. Quinlan. She came to Chicago, where she married Mr. Sullivan in 1885. Five children were born, of whom the four survivors are Boetius, Mrs. Wolf, Mrs. Leo P. Cummings, and Mrs. Thomas V. Brennan. A deceased daughter was Mrs. William P. McEvoy.

Mrs. Sullivan owned the "Justamere Farm" at Gosselville north of Tinley Park and she spent much of her time there during the summer.

Funeral services were held at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning. The body was taken from the residence to Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic church with burial in Mount Carmel cemetery beside the grave of her husband.

Former New Lenox Pastor Joins Prohibition Force

The following article appeared in a recent issue of "The Illinois Issue", the prohibition official paper for this state:

The Anti-Saloon League is to be congratulated on securing the services of Rev. Allison F. Clark on its official staff. Dr. Clark has an admirable record as a Methodist pastor and district superintendent. He has always been deeply interested in the work of the Anti-Saloon League and thoroughly allied to and sympathetic with the nation-wide struggle to destroy the liquor traffic. We believe he will bring much strength to the already effective personnel of the Anti-Saloon League and welcome him gladly to the number of our co-workers. We are sure our friends in the Northern District will gladly rally around Dr. Clark and co-operate with him in his important task.

Our friends will be pleased to read the following brief review of his activities.

Rev. Clark goes to his new work after being in the ministry four decades, during which time he has had 12 pastorates. As a monument to his intense work during that period he leaves eight churches the property value of which approximates a million dollars. It is especially fitting that the church the conference met in this year at Downers Grove was built under the supervision of Dr. Clark during his charge there and it is an interesting fact that the church in Morgan Park, where the convention convened last year was also built by him.

A distinct tribute to Dr. Clark's ability was paid him last year in the publication of the "Journal and Yearbook of the Rock River Conference" which says, "The most distinctive building program on this district (Chicago Western district) was the church at Downers Grove. It was dedicated on Easter Sunday. The dignity, the beauty, and completeness of this structure, when the population and membership of Downers Grove are taken into consideration, make it perhaps notable achievement within our conference. It is the latest tribute to the leadership of one who takes doubtless the palm as builder of churches among the ministers of our conference. I refer to Allison F. Clark, under whose leadership this remarkable sanctuary was begun and also brought to completion.

For six years Dr. Clark was superintendent of the Chicago Northern District and during this time a life active program of building was sponsored throughout the district. It was at this time that the great Missionary Centenary Movement of Methodism was in force and the Chicago Northwest District ranked as one of the four leading units in all Methodism.

For the last two years Dr. Clark has served the Grace M. E. church of Elgin, Illinois, and in that short time many innovations in the church program were made and the Grace Church has taken an active part in the religious life of the city.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark have moved to Chicago and taken up their residence in Oak Park.

You Can't Choose a Room

AND say "I'll place my telephone here because it can be easily reached from all parts of my home." There is no single room which may be termed an ideal location for your telephone. Many times you wish it were in the living room. When a call comes late at night, or when illness comes or other emergencies arise, you wish your telephone were in the bedroom. And what housewife has not wanted a telephone close at hand in the kitchen where calls can be made or answered regardless of household duties!

Extension telephones (additional instruments on the same line) bring telephone service to any or every room in your home. Perhaps you have wanted telephones in some or all the rooms mentioned. Why not have them? They are convenient, enhance the comfort of any room and make your home as modern as this Mechanical Age itself. Best of all, the cost is small.

L. C. STEPHENS, Dist. Mgr. Joliet, Ill. Phone 1250

In a statement recently issued, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson makes a strong appeal to the business interests and buying public to support the campaign of the recently created Buy-Illinois-Products commission to increase the sale of all Illinois commercial goods, both in this state and elsewhere. Illinois, says the governor, is the first state to initiate such a movement, and suggests use by manufacturers of a distinctive label, such as "Made in Illinois." Some time ago, he says, the state purchased a million barrels of cement for road work, and every barrel was bought either from an Illinois cement manufacturer or from concerns in nearby states that use Illinois coal exclusively in making their products. The state buys only Illinois coal for its institutions, and the governor recommends the same policy for counties, cities, villages and school districts. Among the states, Illinois stands third in manufacturing, third in coal production, and 90 per cent of the land in the state, divided into 250,000 farms, is actively used in agriculture. Co-operation in buying among these vast interests, the governor points out, would react to their mutual gain and be reflected in benefits to the general public.

Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, urges support of the sale of Christmas seals, because tuberculosis is everybody's business, and it was never more important than now "to wage vigorous and unrelenting warfare on this disease." The time to stop tuberculosis, he says, is at the very beginning, and this campaign is therefore in behalf of children and young people. "Buying Christmas seals is thus in the nature of playing Santa Claus to the youngsters."

A highway commissioner cannot legally charge and collect pay for his own labor, as distinguished from fees for services as commissioner, Attorney General Carlstrom has ruled. He held also that a highway commissioner charging such fees could be proceeded against by both civil and criminal suits. The attorney general rules also that arrest of persons trespassing or hunting on posted lands may be made by officers of the state conservation department.

Mrs. Jacob Baur, of Chicago, while attending a convention in Springfield, announced that a highly valued mirror which was once used by Abraham Lincoln at his home in the state capital city, will eventually find its way back to the walls of the historic residence. The mirror is in Mrs. Baur's possession, and she made the announcement while visiting the Lincoln home that she will arrange to have the relic returned after her death.

Concoctions illegally called "chocolate milk" have been ruled off the markets at a hearing conducted by Perry McCullough, superintendent of pure food division in the state department of agriculture. The milk fell short of the required 3 per cent of butterfat content, and the so-called chocolate was cocoa, and the two reasons for the ruling. According to food officials there is no genuine chocolate milk on the market to which they take exception.

Ten millions a year could be added to the incomes of Illinois farmers if all of them adopted a hog-feeding plan which the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, will introduce into 32 counties this winter, according to E. T. Robbins, live stock extension specialist. The plan will be taught to farmers in a series of hog feeding schools. Because it cheapens costs, the new plan is just as good a money maker as the swine sanitation system, now used by 20,000 Illinois farmers, it is pointed out.

Wayne Hummer, president of Illinois Chamber of Commerce, has wired to President Hoover that the chambers of commerce of Illinois, having a membership of more than 50,000, are keenly interested in the President's program to insure the future of American business, and pledging co-operation in every possible way.

Commenting on the large amount of work involved in collecting and tabulating vital statistics, Dr. Andy Hall, state health chief, said: "Time was when a man died he was dead and that ended it. Now, however, it is illegal to either die or be born in Illinois without having the facts officially registered. The law requiring all deaths and births to be reported was enacted in 1917."

By recent action of the state parole board, the penalty for gun robbers is six to thirteen years, less the prescribed allowance for good behavior. This amounts roughly to one-third deduction, so the apparent minimum for robbery with gun is four to eight years and eight months. Under this plan, the average penalty in Illinois for this offense will be about twice that of other states. In consequence, work of enlarging state prisons will be pushed to provide quarters for the long-termers, and to relieve the present overcrowded condition.

Detecting crime among the germ population by the finger print method, is now a major function of the state department of health. No less than 354 examinations of this kind are done daily and 17 per cent show evidence of guilt. These facts are disclosed in the annual report of Dr. Andy Hall, state health director. It showed that the laboratory, referred to as the finger print bureau, did 192,296 tests during the last fiscal year, and that 22,421 incriminated numerous bacteria, bent upon destruction of people all over the state. Every county in the state has taken advantage of this service. The tests include tuberculosis, typhoid, diphtheria, trench mouth, undulant fever, tularemia, malaria, and rabies in animals.

Grand championship of the International Live Stock show, Chicago, was won for the third successive time by Edwin P. Hall, of Mechanicsburg, on his lot of fat Aberdeen-Angus yearlings. Purdue university team won the intercollegiate live stock judging contest, in which Illinois university tied Pennsylvania for the tenth place.

Secretary Hyde of the federal department of agriculture has ordered apportionment among the states of a fund of $73,125,000, authorized by congress as federal aid for construction of roads in the fiscal year 1931. There is still an unexpended balance of 28 millions from funds previously apportioned, making a total of more than 100 millions. Of this, Illinois will receive slightly more than three millions.

New building and engineering work contracted in the state in one week recently amounted to $4,461,000. The total volume of all construction contracted, since the first of the current year is approximately 514 millions. These are the figures for the entire state and do not relate to construction of buildings for state institutions.

In an address sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's club at Rockford, Lottie Holman O'Neill, first Illinois woman legislator, proposed registration of lobbyists at Springfield. "Their supporters and their compensation should be made public," she declared. "No one has a right to work to influence the people's representatives unless he makes known his motives and sponsors." The speaker condemned also the use of sly propaganda. "We are coming to be a government of propagandists, and I for one resent it. If they are afraid to come out in the open, it is time for the people to be on guard."

Money lenders who force insurance policies upon borrowers at the time the loan is made, may have their licenses revoked, under a ruling made by Attorney General Carlstrom. Under the small loan act, this practice is illegal. The act provides that the lender is prohibited from taking any compensation for the loan beyond the interest.

Justus L. Johnson, of Aurora, who is being mentioned for the vacancy of congressman-at-large, on the Republican ticket, was in Springfield recently in conference with leaders. He is a former newspaper man, having been a reporter on the Illinois State Journal in 1927, and at one time was editor of the Aurora Beacon News.

Creation of a state department of animal husbandry was asked by the Illinois Veterinary association, meeting in Chicago early in December. The veterinarians will make an appeal for legislation to secure this department. The work of such a department is now directed by a layman under supervision of the state department of agriculture, which has charge of all live stock and disease control, were pointed out as the reasons for making the change.

Decisions recently handed down by the United States Supreme court have upheld the highway laws of several states, including gasoline tax law of California and that state's highway tax on busses and trucks operating between fixed points over regular routes. This is taken to indicate the court's attitude, should a gas tax law from Illinois be passed upon.

According to recent reports, coal production in Illinois shows a healthful increase. Though not phenomenal, it is sufficient to indicate that there is some response to the "Buy Illinois Products" campaign now going on in behalf of coal mining especially and other industries in general.

A mile of experimental gravel road of the "traffic bound" type and conforming to state highway department specifications for gravel and grading, has been completed by Logan county authorities. Logan county has been trying out gravel roads for several years, but has not found an entirely satisfactory type.

The state will reimburse county fairs to the extent of $270,782 as its share of the $400,000 paid out in premiums to exhibitors this year, according to reports to the office of Clarence F. Buck, director of agriculture. In 1928, 72 counties participated in the appropriation; this year 61 counties participate in the state funds. In order to qualify for this distribution, fairs must be free from objectionable features, such as fraudulent concessions, gambling, intoxicating liquor and indecent shows.

Lesson for December 15

THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT IN INDUSTRY

LESSON TEXT—Deut. 24:14, 15; Matt. 20:1-16; Mark 12:1-9; Luke 3:7-14; Eph. 6:5-9; 1 Tim. 6:17-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—As ye would men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Kindness to Those Who Work for Us.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Kindness to Those Who Work for Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Fair Play in the Day's Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Golden Rule in the Work of the World.

While some of these instructions were given to Israel, showing what God required of them, we should remember that He requires no less at our hand.

I. Treatment of Hired Servants (Deut. 24:14, 15).

Political and industrial power have been used through the centuries in the oppression of the poor and weak.

1. Oppression forbidden (v. 14). The man who hires out is usually poor and needy. The employer should not take advantage of his poverty.

2. Foreigners to have the same treatment as fellow countrymen.

3. Wages to be promptly paid (v. 15).

The laborer was to be paid at the end of the day. The credit system in industry is greatly to be deplored. It places the purchaser at a disadvantage, and causes a bad psychological reaction upon his personality.

II. Fidelity to Contracts (Matt. 20:1-16).

In this parable it is clearly made known that there was agreement between employer and employee as to wages and time. Though those employed at a later hour received the same wage, there was no occasion for complaint by those first employed, for they received their wage according to agreement. Fidelity to agreement, is essential in industry.

III. Unfaithful Tenancy (Mark 12:1-9).

In this parable a valuable vineyard was rented out to husbandmen. They not only refused to turn over the just returns to its owner, but shamefully treated his servants who were sent to collect rental. Those entrusted with possessions and power are under solemn obligation to make proper returns therefor.

IV. Contentment With Wages (Luke 3:14).

One of the chief difficulties in the industrial world today is discontent with wages. Oftentimes workers fail to take account of the conditions of business even to the extent of going on strike and make demands as to wages which the proprietor cannot meet. Contentment with wages does not mean that one should not be ambitious to prepare himself for a more efficient service and higher wages.

V. Reciprocal Duties of Servants and Masters (Eph. 6:5-9).

1. Servants are to be obedient to their masters (vv. 5-8).

This obedience should be (1) "with fear and trembling"; that is, the servant should have a proper regard for his master and an earnest desire to please him. (2) With singleness of heart. Servants should perform their tasks as though doing them for Christ's sake. (3) Not with eye service. Acceptable service should be honest, not merely to please the eye of the one who looks on, but as unto Christ. (4) With good will. This expresses the spirit of service. It should not primarily be for approval or pay. Christian servants will perform their duties with the same fidelity as they would unto Christ. (5) Rewarded by the Lord (v. 8). The Lord takes account of our service in the common rounds of life and will one day reward us accordingly.

2. Masters to be considerate (v. 9). Just as servants are to give wholehearted consideration to their masters, so masters are to look out for the best interests of their servants.

(1) Masters should desist from threatenings. (2) They should be impartial in dealings with their servants.

VI. Responsibility of the Rich (1 Tim. 6:17-19).

Riches are possible to Christians, but most perilous. God charges such: 1. Not to be high-minded; that is, to have a sense of superiority.

2. Not to trust in the uncertainty of riches.

3. Riches to be properly used. (1) To do good. Not for selfish gratification, but for the welfare of others. (2) To be minister to good works. (3) The rich are under obligation to minister to the poor and the needy.

Intolerable Pride

I think half the troubles for which men go slouching in prayer to God are caused by their intolerable pride. Many of our cares are but a morbid way of looking at our privilege. We let our blessings get moldy and then call them curses.—Beecher.

Preparedness

He is to be pitied, indeed, who has seen better days ahead of him, yet has made no preparation for living them better.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

SCREEN-GRID (BATTERY... OR HOUSE CURRENT) ELECTRO-DYNAMIC

A radio—fine! but an Atwater Kent—that's great!

EVEN YOUNG FOLKS know the difference. Just watch their eyes glow when they discover their new radio is an Atwater Kent!

Why is it that this one name in a radio means so much, particularly to those who live on farms? Perhaps it's because Atwater Kent Radio asks for no time out for trouble. Perhaps it's because Atwater Kent never offers any improvement in radio until it has first been thoroughly tried and tested.

You'll enjoy a real sense of satisfaction in owning the greatest radio Atwater Kent has ever built—the new Screen-Grid, Electro-Dynamic, operated either by batteries or from the high line. The two types contain the same proved improvements, giant power, needle-point selectivity, purer tone, and a choice of cabinets or table model. Why not, this Christmas, join your home to the largest radio family in the world,* who get the great programs of the air with Atwater Kent Radio?

*Nearly 3,000,000 Atwater Kent Sets sold to date.

ATWATER KENT MANUFACTURING CO.
A. Atwater Kent, President
4225 Wissahickon Ave. Philadelphia, Pa.

SCHOOLGIRLS NEED HEALTH

Daughter of Mrs. Catherine Lamuth
Box 72, Mohawk, Michigan

"After my daughter grew into womanhood she began to feel rundown and weak and a friend asked me to get her your medicine. She took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine. Her nerves are better, her appetite is good, she is in good spirits and able to work every day. We recommend the Vegetable Compound to other girls and to their mothers."—Mrs. Catherine Lamuth.

Daughter of Mrs. Eva Wood Howe
1006 South H. Street, Danville, Ill.

"I praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for my fourteen-year-old daughter as well as for me. It has helped her growth and her nerves and she has a good appetite now and sleeps well. She has gone to school every day since beginning the medicine. I will continue to give it to her at regular intervals and will recommend it to other mothers who have daughters with similar troubles."—Mrs. Eva Wood Howe.

IT WAS cold. About six inches of snow had fallen within the last few days. The stores were gay with their glistening decorations and pretty holiday gifts. The pine and spruce trees on the lawns were shining with many colored electric lights. It would be Christmas in a few days.

John Clair and Gordon Lawson were sitting before the open fire in the New Haven University club. They were young, good looking and frankly men of leisure.

"I think I shall go to Miami soon," said John Clair, as he filled his pipe. "It's getting cold here now."

"Why don't you stay a while?" asked Gordon, "the season's just started, and there are some very pretty debs this year."

"Women, all you think of is women," said Clair disdainfully.

The two men were silent for a few minutes. Then John said: "Oh, by the way, Lawson, what are you giving the ladies for Christmas?"

"Why?"

"Oh—just a matter of my feeble but still functioning curiosity."

"For Carmine—a gorgeous dresser set (she's vain); for Lela—a rope of pearls (she has an unusually beautiful throat) for Marise—"

"Stop!" interposed Clair. "Why don't you give her something original—a beautiful shoe tree set, for instance?"

"What are you going to give the darlings for Christmas?" demanded Lawson.

"My dear Lawson," he answered condescendingly. "I am going to present a girl with her brother as a gift."

"A brother? Why not a husband?"

"That will come later. Shall I tell you the story?"

"Yes, go ahead—if it gets too tiresome I'll let you know."

"Do you remember when I graduated from Yale?" began Clair; "that was about three years ago, I believe, and a notable year, because it was the last time I ever did any work."

Lawson sighed. "Ah—the detailed history of John Clair," he murmured.

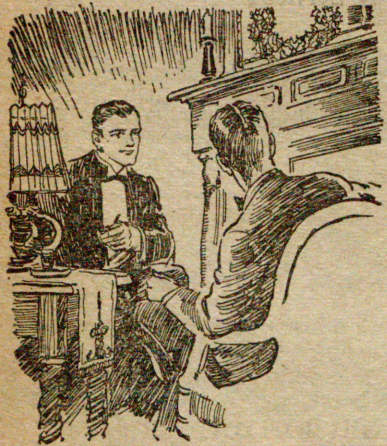

"My father died the year after, you will recall," continued Clair. "Well, the last year I was at school the family went to Europe and closed the town house. So I rented a flat."

"You were always clever," said Lawson with mock appraisal.

"Strange as it may seem to you, Lawson, I have a hidden talent. I can write. When I was in school I even had aspirations to be a newspaper man."

"I see. This is only about yourself. There are no women in this narrative."

"Wait a moment. There will be presently. The whole story hangs on the fact that about Christmas time that year I wrote an unusually good English theme. It was about a Russian Christmas."

"Good Lord," ejaculated Lawson, "you've never been to Russia, man."

"I know, but I took the idea from a book, or magazine or something, and rewrote it. Well, the good-hearted prof. handed it in to one of the papers, and they published it. How realistic that story was you will understand in a few minutes."

"I hope so."

"Christmas eve I was coming home rather late from a party, in fact a series of parties, so it was almost dawn when I let myself in the apartment. And what should I see curled up asleep on the chesterfield but a girl. She was poorly dressed, and she had a lot of dark hair that had fallen across her face, so I couldn't tell whether or not she was pretty, but I took the chance, and awakened her. She sat up straight and looked at me and smiled. She was beautiful, fine features and that sort of thing. And a figure that would make most of these debs turn green with envy. Well, anyhow she started talking to me in an ungodly tongue and all I could do was look amazed."

"Aren't you Russian?" she asked. "Heaven forbid," I replied; "I am a God-fearing American citizen, about to graduate from Yale, and—"

"I beg your pardon," she said coldly, and moved toward the door.

"I am sorry if I have offended you in any way," I apologized. "Won't you at least stay and have breakfast with me?"

"She shook her head, but when she saw how it was snowing outside she reconsidered, and turned around."

"I suppose you deserve an explanation," she said.

"You don't have to tell me a thing if you don't care to," I replied.

"You funny boy; don't you think it is at all strange to find a girl whom you'd never seen before, asleep in your apartment?"

"I don't know—I was just wondering why I ever stopped believing in Santa Claus," I answered.

"The girl laughed, and after that we got along beautifully. While we were eating breakfast she told me all about it. It seems that she was a member of the aristocracy in Russia, not a princess, perhaps, but still of very high rank. Well, she and her brother managed to get along for a time, then one day he left her to go to another town on business, and he never came back. She heard from him once or twice, and he said he was escaping to America, and asked her to follow him. So she did. And she told her story to the New York and Boston newspapers, but she was never able to find any trace of him. Almost penniless, she came to New Haven. She read my story, thought perhaps I was a Russian writing under a pen name, went to the newspaper office, obtained my address, and with a few faint hopes, she came to my apartment."

"Of course the men in the office knew who you were," she said indignantly, "but I suppose they thought it would be a good story for you to find me here."

"God bless the newspaper men," I said fervently. "And I'll help you find your brother—what is your name, by the way?"

"Dounia Petromonoff, but I couldn't think of letting you try to find him," she protested.

"Think nothing of it. I am training to be a detective, and that will be good practice."

"I don't believe it," she laughed, "but you are a dear American, so I think I shall let you."

"How nice of her," interrupted Lawson. "And I suppose you found the brother?"

"Yes, I found him just a few days ago, playing in a cafe in Hartford. It was a sort of Russian resort. So I gave him her address and a little cash. As you have probably concluded, I fell in love with the girl, but I decided I wouldn't ask her to marry me until I had found her brother."

"I understand. You wanted to make her feel indebted to you."

"She is wonderful," he mused, "wonderful."

The two men smoked in silence for a few minutes. Then a boy brought in the afternoon mail. Clair looked through his until he found a small envelope addressed in large, unusual handwriting.

"An invitation to spend Christmas with Dounia and her brother," he exclaimed, as he tore open the letter: "May I come, too?" teased Lawson.

Clair read:

"Dear Johnnie:

I want to thank you many, many times for finding Leo. It has made me very happy, and you were so kind to look for him. But I want to ask your forgiveness for deceiving you, for it wasn't my brother whom you were looking for. It was my husband."

"He sends his best regards. We both want you to spend Christmas with us. You will come, won't you, Johnnie? Affectionately,

The Event We Celebrate on December 25

Modernistic "Madonna" Statue by Arnold Hensler

"The Nativity" by Gerard David (15th Century)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

CROSS the stage of Time have stalked great men of all degrees. Princes and potentates kings and emperors, conquerors and rulers, great captains in war and great statesmen in peace, orators and learned men in the arts and sciences—all have enjoyed their hour of fame and for some of them history has preserved at best but one eventful moment in their careers. But there is one event in history which stands out above all others, for all their pomp and circumstance and all the panoply and pageantry that attends the scenes which men call great events. It took place in humble surroundings—a stable in a little town in Palestine. It was the birth of a child who was destined to give to the world a new religion and to humanity a new hope.

And this event which we celebrate on December 25 has been the inspiration for the greatest painters of all time who, instead of recording the deeds and triumphs of captains and kings, have chosen to delineate this greatest of all events. The Nativity, and those figures of greatest appeal to all mankind, the Madonna and Child. Poets, too, have found in the birth of Christ a theme for their genius. Long ago "rare Ben Jonson" sang this:

HYMN ON THE NATIVITY OF MY SAVIOUR

I sing the birth was born to-night,
The author both of life and light;
The angels so did sound it,
And like the ravish'd shepherds said,
Who saw the light and were afraid,
Yet searched, and true they found it.

The Son of God, the Eternal King,
That did us all salvation bring,
And freed the soul from danger;
He whom the whole world could not take,
The World, which heaven and earth did make,
Was now laid in a manger.

The Father's wisdom will'd it so,
The Son's obedience knew no No,
Both wills were in one stature;
And as that wisdom had decreed,
The Word was now made Flesh indeed,
And took on Him our nature.

What comfort by Him do we win
Who made Himself the price of sin
To make us heirs of glory!
To see this Babe, all innocence,
A martyr born in our defense—
Can man forget the story?

And another master of verse, his eyes blinded but his soul seeing the wonder and glory of that scene in Bethlehem, also wrote of it. He was John Milton, and the following are some of the verses from his:

TME HYMN OF CHRIST'S NATIVITY

It was the winter wild,
While the heaven-born Child
All meanly wrapt in the rude manger lies;
Nature, in awe to Him,
Had doth'd her gaudy trim,
With her great Master so to sympathize:
It was no season then for her
To wanton with the sun, her lusty paramour.

And Dorothy Belle Flanagan has written this charming

LULLABY FROM A STABLE

Sleep, little baby,
Sleep, little son . . .
Over the earth a cold wind blows,
Over the hills is spread the night,

ORLAND PARK

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Cooper left LaGrange, Ill., Wednesday morning, December 4, driving thru to St. Petersburg and Miami, Florida. Mrs. Frank Harman is with them and a report comes from Macon, Georgia, all is well so far but still cold and rain.

James E. Creer is having a new floor laid in his store. He also is having a basement excavated which completed will be used by Clarence E. Beagley, local electrical contractor for store room and work shop. He will use his present quarters entirely for show room purposes.

Orland Park has had a mystery since last Saturday morning when a badly wrecked car was found along the north side of 143rd at the west end of the village limits. The license plates had been removed from the car.

Carpenters are busy getting the interior of the Thomas Davidson building ready for the new variety store. Mr. Davidson will also have an office in this building.

The Southwest Community Parish play "The Third Floor Back" is to be presented at Lemont this Saturday night.

The Orland Park M. E. church is preparing for their annual Christmas program to be held Christmas Eve. A cantata "The Nativity" will be given by the senior department and a play will be presented by the junior department. A big surprise is also in store.

A Christmas box is also being made up for the boys and girls of Marcey Center, Chicago. The Girl's Club is also planning a Christmas dinner for a family of the Halsted Street Industrial church in Chicago.

A church night program and a pot luck supper were held Wednesday night at the M. E. Church. Moving pictures were also shown.

The newly organized Sunday evening Club meets next Sunday at 6:30 p. m.

Rev. Coates of Lemont exchanged pulpits with Rev. Sanders last Sunday.

Funeral services for Miss Ella Virginia Tourtelot, sister of Mayor Edward Tourtelot of Palos who died November 29th were held last Monday from the Kreuger funeral parlors, Blue Island. Rev. Paul Sanders officiating. Burial was in Oakwood Cemetery, Chicago. The services were largely attended. Mrs. Claude Buck of Palos, wife of the artist, sang. The deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. Ray Bremmer of Palos, two brothers Edward and William also of Palos; Jack of Florida. The son of Edward Conway of Worth is ill with an abscess at the Holy Cross hospital, Chicago.

Practical Electrical Gifts Useful thru all the Year

RCA RADIOLA 66

The volume control regulates the loudspeaker output from inaudibility to full volume. A local distance switch provides equally fine reception on both strong local and weak distant stations. Facilities are provided for attaching an electric pickup to reproduce phonograph records.

Radiotrons required for Radiola 66 are 6UY-227, one UX-245 and one UX 280 . . . $ 21.50
RADIOLA 66, less Radiotrons, $225.00
RADIOLA 66, with Radiotrons $246.50

RCA RADIOLA 33

Entirely new and distinctive is the new RCA Radiola 33.

Radiola 33 operates direct from the AC lighting circuit—is sturdily constructed of the finest materials—has beauty and substantial volume of tone. It is mechanically correct.

RADIOLA 33 $54.00
Tubes 14.75
100 B. Speaker 17.50
RADIOLA 333 Console style complete $114

RCA RADIOLA 46 (Screen-Grid)

This new RCA Screen Grid tube circuit combined with the power driven, RCA Electro Dynamic Loud Speaker reproduces speech and music with a quality, clarity and depth of tone that is truly remarkable.

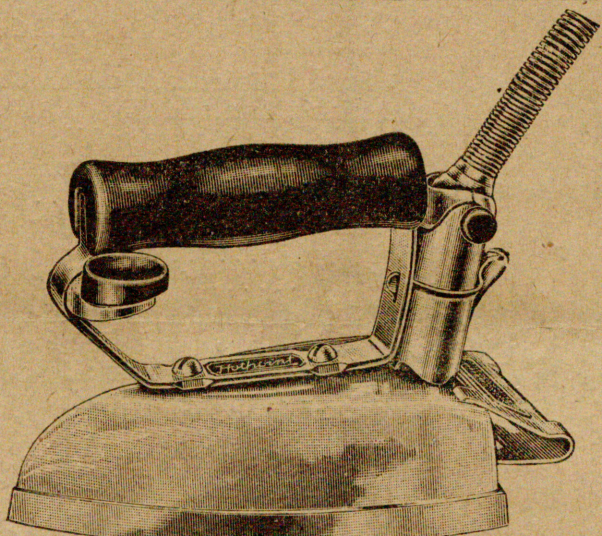

Radiotrons required for Radiola 46 are three UY-224, one UX 245 and one UX 280 . . . $18.50
RADIOLA 46, less Radiotrons $130.00
RADIOLA 46, with Radiotrons $148.50

RCA RADIOLA 44 (Screen-Grid)

Radiola 44 has exceptional tone and volume when used with Radiola 103 speaker. Three UY 224 Screen-Grid tubes are used in the detector and RF circuits. A UX 245 tube serves as an audio amplifier.

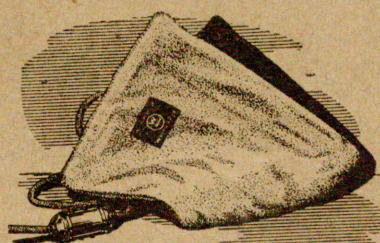

Radiotrons required for Radiola 44 are three UY-224, and one UX 245 and one UX 280 . . . $ 18.50
